

"most competitive women's field"

leon2 315 posts since

Dec 14, 2007

"I feel this is the most competitive women's field that has ever been assembled in London ..."

Sorry, David. I think the most competitive field you ever had was the year Paula, Deena, and Ndereba were duking it out.

Nice try though.

<http://www.iaaf.org/news/Kind=2/newsId=37117.html>[/URL" target="_blank">

hrmay 12 posts since

Apr 1, 2000 1. Re: "most competitive women's field" Dec 25, 2006 2:46 PM

Radcliffe, Ndereba, and Kastor is a tough field to beat, but I would say this year's London women's field has a lot of depth and women with similar PRs, which could in fact make it a very competitive race. Not the field most likely to set a new world record, but it could be an exciting race. Adere, Noguchi, Wami, Kiplagat, Tomescu-Dita and many other good names should keep it interesting.

leon2 315 posts since

Dec 14, 2007 2. Re: "most competitive women's field" Mar 3, 2007 10:03 AM quote:

Originally posted by hrmay:

Adere, Noguchi, Wami, Kiplagat, Tomescu-Dita and many other good names should keep it interesting.

I was picking Noguchi to win, but she won't run this year. My second pick is Tomescu-Dita.

"most competitive women's field"

maryt091 782 posts since

Dec 14, 2007 3. Re: "most competitive women's field" Mar 3, 2007 12:22 PM

Not exactly chopped liver in Boston.

Deena Kastor will be running along with last year's winner , rising star Rita Jeptoo of Kenya, and Jelena Prokopcuka of Latvia who won the last two New York marathons.

Track & Field News ranked Kastor the #1 runner in the world last year and gave Prokopcuka the #2 rank and Jeptoo the #3 rank.